The contents of correctional education

The correctional education shall be provided by combining lifestyle guidance, vocational guidance, school course teaching, physical education and special activities guidance according to the characteristics of the juveniles.

Lifestyle guidance

The instructors provide the guidance for juveniles to obtain basic knowledge and life attitude for an independent life.

As a part of education for the improvement of the underlying problems that each inmate has, various kinds of educational programs have been provided.
Vocational guidance

The guidance is aiming for enhancing the motivation to work and obtaining the vocationally useful knowledge and skills.

- PC practice
- Welding training
- Career planning guidance

School course teaching

The guidance for the juveniles who have not completed compulsory education or those who wish to enter high school has been provided.

The juveniles shall have opportunities to take Japanese high-school equivalency examination.

- School course teaching
- Guidance by visiting lecturers

Physical education

The guidance aiming for fostering sound mind and body in order to live an independent social life has been provided.

- Soccer
- Sports festival
- Swimming
Enhancement of rehabilitation support

Aiming for smooth rehabilitation in society for the juveniles who have difficulties in leading an independent life after release, support for learning and working, securing of a place of residence and continuous support in collaboration with medical/welfare institutions have been provided.

Special activities guidance

Juvenile training schools provide social contribution activities and outdoor activities to enrich sensibility, and to cultivate independency, autonomy and cooperativeness. They also conduct seasonal events with the help of local communities, because communication with local people is important.

Contribution activities as a member of society, such as cleanup of local parks and facilities, or experience of nursing care in nursing home etc., have been performed.

Job assistance

Instructors also provide education and support for juveniles to enhance the motivation to work and to have an image of future career through career counseling. Furthermore, in collaboration with job-placement offices, juvenile training schools have an emphasis on securing employment.
Cooperation with their guardians

It is important to have cooperative relationships with their guardians for smooth re-entry into society of the juveniles. The juvenile training schools make an effort to obtain an understanding for correctional education and cooperation from their parents, performing the interview by the instructors for the juveniles with their guardians and encouraging the guardians to participate in the educational events.

Consultation from the released juveniles

Released juveniles can hold consultations with their instructors on their personal affairs including their futures and relationships with their friends. Their guardians also can do.

Juvenile Training School Visiting Committee

In each juvenile training school, “Juvenile Training School Visiting Committee” whose members are attorneys and doctors etc. is established. The committee studies the circumstances of the administration of the juvenile training school by visiting juvenile training schools, holding interviews with juveniles, reading letters from juveniles, and receiving explanations from the juvenile training school, and gives its opinions to the head of the school.
