BlackRock

Larry Fink

BlackRock C.E.O.

"Society is demanding that companies, both public and private, serve a social purpose. To prosper over time, every company must not only deliver financial performance, but also show how it makes a positive contribution to society."

“BlackRock will avoid investments in companies that present high sustainability-related risks, particularly those that fail to align with the transition to a low-carbon economy.”

with Laws and Policies

Companies that fail to adapt to ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance) standards can face significant negative consequences.

In 2021 The hedge fund Engine No. 1. launched a campaign to elect new directors to the company's board who were focused on pushing Exxon towards a more sustainable energy future.

>> This was seen as a clear signal that shareholders wanted a more aggressive approach to ESG issues.

In 2024 The two ESG-focused activist groups, Arjuna Capital and Follow This, who had submitted shareholder proposals aimed at pushing the company to adopt more stringent climate-related targets, particularly around reducing its Scope 3 greenhouse gas emissions.

>> This case is significant as it underscores the growing challenges that companies face in navigating the complex landscape of ESG expectations

Air conditioning and refrigeration companies are beginning to use natural refrigerants.

This change will have a positive impact on producers, consumers and the environment.
